* Null hypothesis value outside the confidence interval.

Note. Outcomes are the maternal mortality ratio per 100,000 live births and the under-5, infant and neonatal mortality rates per 1,000 live births. Each column is one panel regression with country and year fixed effects. Cells are the adjusted beta coefficient and its 95 percent confidence interval, computed from standard errors clustered by country. Coefficients are the absolute change in the outcome for a one unit change in the predictor. Armed conflict is lagged by one year. GDP per capita is logged, so its coefficient is the change in the outcome for an e-fold increase in GDP; a 10 percent increase is about a tenth of that. Year dummies are fitted but not shown.
